

8 tools for your Tough Days

Small, practical things that actually help, whatever job you do.

- 1 Notice the loss, not just the tired
Losing interest in things you used to enjoy is a real sign to get support, not just push through.

- 2 Mark the end of your shift
Change your shirt, put your phone on do not disturb, anything that tells your mind the day is over, not just your body.

- 3 Take real breaks
Two minutes of movement every hour beats pushing straight through.

- 4 Protect the first twenty minutes home
Rest before chores or anyone else gets a claim on you.

- 5 Tell one person, not everyone
One honest chat with someone you trust does more than staying silent.

- 6 Schedule connection
Pick a set time each day to check in with someone, especially if your work is solitary.

- 7 Do something just for you
Even three minutes counts, and it's not selfish.

- 8 Don't decide big things on a bad day
Give yourself space before quitting or walking away from anything major.
